Dear Madam/Sir

I am a pediatrician practising in Delhi for 48 years.

I write to say that the problem of food and drink products listed above has become an everyday affair for us. As you can imagine we feel very much for these children (and their parents) — since we see the children gaining obnoxious amounts of weight, with all of its attendant problems, both short and long term.

All of us who are connected with this vital issue have to pull our weight if this problem is to be suitably addressed.

It is my humble plea that a star rating on the products wrapper is not the way forward if we are to achieve a semblance of control over this public health emergency.

With best wishes and regards
Subhash Dawar.
